LA GUARDIA ACTS AS STRIKE SPREADS

GOUGHAN MAYOR, M'GRADY STUDY NECESSARY ACT

General Walk-Out of All Organized Labor in New York is Threatened

PARK-AVE FIGHT SCENE

Leaders Say Elevator Operators May Leave Jobs in Other Eastern Cities

NEW YORK, March 4.—(UP)—Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia and federal mediators pressed for settlement of New York City's elevator strike today while heads of the building service employees' union threatened to call a nationwide walkout of their members and arranged to discuss possibility of a general strike of organized labor in greater New York.

The executive board of the International Building Service Employees' Union in Chicago telegraphed George A. Scalise, international vice president, that it had decided "that, if necessary and at your discretion, it will pull out every building service employee in the United States."

Scalise has been helping direct the strike here, which by interruption of elevator operation and other services, has inconvenienced a million of New York dwellers in cliff-like apartment houses and has led to fighting and window-smashing in exclusive Park avenue.

James J. Bambrick, head of the Manhattan local of the union, declared meantime that he would meet at 5 p. m. with heads of other unions to discuss the advisability of calling a general strike here.

There was no immediate indication as to the attitude of other unions toward the talk of a general strike. The threat to discuss that possibility, and the talk of an elevator strike in other cities, were regarded generally as an effort to build up the union's bargaining position in further mediation conferences today.

WEST VIRGINIA GIRL LAUGHING TO DEATH

Teresa Hawkins Growing Weaker After Continuing Action Seven Days; Physicians Are Puzzled

WESTON, W. VA., March 4.—(UP)—Pretty Teresa Hawkins was literally laughing herself to death today. Physicians who have watched her laugh for seven days said she was growing weaker, though the violence of her paroxysms decreased.

Teresa, 18-year-old daughter of a railroad telegrapher, began laughing without any preliminary ailment while attending a movie with other young people last Wednesday night. Six hours before she had won the highest mark in her class in a business college examination.

Dr. J. E. Offner, superintendent of West State hospital, was no more able to diagnose her illness than physicians of Johns Hopkins hospital, where she was treated until yesterday. The girl's parents said Johns Hopkins physicians offered them no hope of recovery.

"We know that Teresa is suffering some form of psycho-neurosis," Dr. Offner said, "but no more."

Blood samples were sent to laboratories for minute analysis but Dr. Offner thought that a cure, if one is found, must be wrought through a psychological approach.

Teresa occasionally suppressed the laughter enough to eat semi-liquid foods, but was only semi-conscious. Exhaustion of her diaphragm and heart muscles were the threats to her life.

EXPERTS CALLED AS DRIVE OPENS TO ALTER TAXES

"Useless Projects" Hit By Rep. Knutson as Economy Campaign Starts

MAY SLASH BILLION

Oliphant, Helvering, Parker, Other Specialists Ordered to Testify

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(UP)—In the face of partisan protests and a Republican-sponsored economy drive, a house subcommittee today questioned treasury experts in a critical study of President Roosevelt's suggested $1,614,600,000 corporate tax revision.

The economy drive was started by Rep. Harold Knutson, R., Minn., who proposed that the government save $1,000,000,000 by abandonment of "useless projects" and thus obviate necessity for new taxes. Earlier this week Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, R., Mich., had urged similar action in the senate.

Rep. Hill in Charge
The tax study was by a subcommittee of the house appropriations committee headed by Rep. Rep. Knute Hill, D., Wash.

The committee called in treasury experts for an executive session to obtain detailed schedules of suggested rates and yields.

Those called before the committee were Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the treasury, Guy T. Helvering, internal revenue, L. N. Parker, congressional tax expert, and several other treasury specialists on tax questions.

The subcommittee executive sessions were expected to continue for a week, during which there would be a thorough exploration of the proposed levy on corporate undistributed surpluses designed to raise $62,000,000 in new revenue and replace existing corporate taxes amounting to $984,600,000.

This room, it is reported, is next but one to that which Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh have selected as the nursery of their son Jon, whom they brought to Great Britain in fear of kidnappers.

Long Barn is at Weald, in Kent, near Seven Oaks.

HAUCK TO FIGHT GOVERNOR'S ACT

Hunterdon Prosecutor Says Hoffman Flaunting Law

TRENTON, N. J., March 4.—(UP)—The chances for Bruno Richard Hauptmann to live past the week of March 30 were lessened today when Prosecutor Anthony Hauck, of Hunterdon-co, announced he had "every determination" to fight against any further reprieve for the convicted slayer of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

"I feel that the governor of this state has laughed at and flaunted the courts long enough," Hauck said, "I feel it is my duty to oppose any attempt to further delay the just execution of sentence on the man who killed the Lindbergh baby."

Hauck said he had consulted authorities and had been advised that he was the only one who could bring suit to set aside a reprieve in event Gov. Harold G. Hoffman should decide to attempt to extend Hauptmann's life-span.

The governor already has granted one reprieve which saved the German carpenter from death in state prison's electric chair the week of January 13.

Hauck conceded that "a lot may happen between now and the week of March 30, of course, but it would have to be something important to alter my attentions."

LEIST MAY RULE TONIGHT ON PIN, MARBLE DEVICES

Council Expected to Hear Legal Opinion of Solicitor on Gaming Machines

DECISION IS AWAITED

Judge King's Ruling Quoted By Owners of Tables in Seeking Their Return

A showdown on legality of pin and marble games, so far as Circleville is concerned, is expected tonight when council meets and will probably hear the opinion of Solicitor Carl C. Leist.

Mr. Leist has informed various persons that his legal opinion will be determined sometime this afternoon, and that council will undoubtedly hear it this evening.

On his ruling concerning legality will depend, probably, whether table machines may be a week ago on orders of Mayor Director Charles Canby will be returned. A local man and woman in Chillicothe have been using influence possible to permit return of machines which they own. They have been straining the "home-town" angle, declaring that Circleville owners should be permitted to install the various devices.

Out of Mayor's Hands
The question of legality was handed to Solicitor Leist this week by Mayor W. J. Grogan. The matter is out of my hands now, Mr. Graham declared Wednesday, "and we will be governed by any decision rendered by the solicitor."

Only one machine, so far as is known, remains in operation in the city's business places.

Owners of some of the pin game devices base their fight for return of the machines on a Franklin-co decision Jan. 22 in Judge John R. King's court. Judge King allowed an injunction restraining police from interfering with games operated by George Barok of the Ohio Skill Game Co. The court ruled that "on their face the games are not gambling devices" but he specified that if the police found any of the games being used for gambling purposes they were to be destroyed.

City's 'Dads' May Speak
Several councilmen may have something to say about the return of the devices to business places. One remarked today: "There will be no return and the one that is now operating had better be removed pretty soon."

Lindbergh Jr.

"I feel that the governor of this state has laughed at and flaunted the courts long enough," Hauck said, "I feel it is my duty to oppose any attempt to further delay the just execution of sentence on the man who killed the Lindbergh baby."

Hauck said he had consulted authorities and had been advised that he was the only one who could bring suit to set aside a reprieve in event Gov. Harold G. Hoffman should decide to attempt to extend Hauptmann's life-span.

The governor already has granted one reprieve which saved the German carpenter from death in state prison's electric chair the week of January 13.

Hauck conceded that "a lot may happen between now and the week of March 30, of course, but it would have to be something important to alter my attentions."

COUNTY EXPENSE FOR CATTLE TEST INCREASED $2,000

The recent appropriation of 1,000 for testing cattle for tuberculosis was raised to $3,000 Tuesday by the county commissioners after information was received by the original appropriation was insufficient to cover the work.

Commissioner C. E. Wright voted "no" on the new appropriation, contending he did not believe the county should share such a large part of the expense. He stated he was greatly in favor of the tests but he believed the government and state should take care of a larger part of the expense.

KENTUCKY TO APPROVE NEW GOVERNMENT PLAN

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 4.—(UP)—Administration leaders today planned a concerted effort to push Gov. A. B. Chandler's state government reorganization bill to passage in the Kentucky House of Representatives by Saturday night.

Several amendments were to be offered. One by Rep. John Hunt, Louisville, will suggest three highway commissioners instead of nine. Rep. J. L. McDermott, Ft. Thomas, will suggest a separate body to supervise state buildings.

LEIST MAY RULE TONIGHT ON PIN, MARBLE DEVICES

Council Expected to Hear Legal Opinion of Solicitor on Gaming Machines

DECISION IS AWAITED

Judge King's Ruling Quoted By Owners of Tables in Seeking Their Return

A showdown on legality of pin and marble games, so far as Circleville is concerned, is expected tonight when council meets and will probably hear the opinion of Solicitor Carl C. Leist.

On his ruling concerning legality will depend, probably, whether table machines removed a week ago on orders of Safety Director Charles Caskey will be returned. A local man and another in Chillicothe have been using all influence possible to permit return of machines which they own. They have been stressing the "home-town" angle, declaring that Circleville owners should be permitted to install the various devices.

Out of Mayor's Hands

The question of legality was handed to Solicitor Leist this week by Mayor W. J. Graham. "The matter is out of my hands now," Mr. Graham declared Wednesday, "and we will be governed by any decision rendered by the solicitor."

Only one machine, so far as is known, remains in operation in the city's business places. Owners of some of the pin game devices base their fight for return of the machines on a Franklin-co. decision Jan. 22 in Judge King R. King's court. Judge King allowed an injunction restraining police from interfering with games operated by George Barok of the Ohio Skill Game Co. The court ruled that "on their face the games are not gambling devices" but he specified that if the police found any of the games being used for gambling purposes they were to be destroyed.

City's 'Dads' May Speak
Several councilmen may have something to say about the return of the devices to business places. One remarked today: "There will be no return and the one that is now operating had better be removed pretty soon."

IONS DIFFER FOURTH YEAR WITH FDR BEGINS

Farley Predicts Big Margin;
Many Politicians Changing Alignments

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(UP)—President Roosevelt observed the third anniversary of his inauguration today well into his 1936 fight for re-election against campaign criticism of New Deal spending and continued unemployment.

The president is charged with violating his oath to preserve, defend and protect the Constitution. He counters that the Supreme Court has placed a narrow "horse and buggy" interpretation on the federal government's authority to cope with national social and economic questions.

Republican attack strikes at alleged White House grasping of power at the expense of congress and the states.

Little Man's Choice

The new deal claims, however, that the forgotten man or little fellow element of the population accepts Mr. Roosevelt as its champion and will parade to the polls for him in November. Democratic leaders find much comfort in the belief that labor generally leans toward the New Deal.

Postmaster General James A. Farley predicts the election will return an unprecedented vote of confidence in Roosevelt reform and recovery. But the Republican legions which were hopeless 18 months ago have found new confidence in evidence that the president's popularity has slumped from its peaks of 1932 and 1934.

Re-alignment of political parties is underway as this anniversary passes and the nation heads into the presidential campaign. A faction of conservative Democrats has bolted Mr. Roosevelt and others are preparing to take a walk. Major desertions, however, are limited to non-office holding Democrats.

Political cleavage extends into the Republican party. Some progressive Republicans are marching with New Deal troops. Another progressive faction is contesting Republican regulars for control of the GOP.

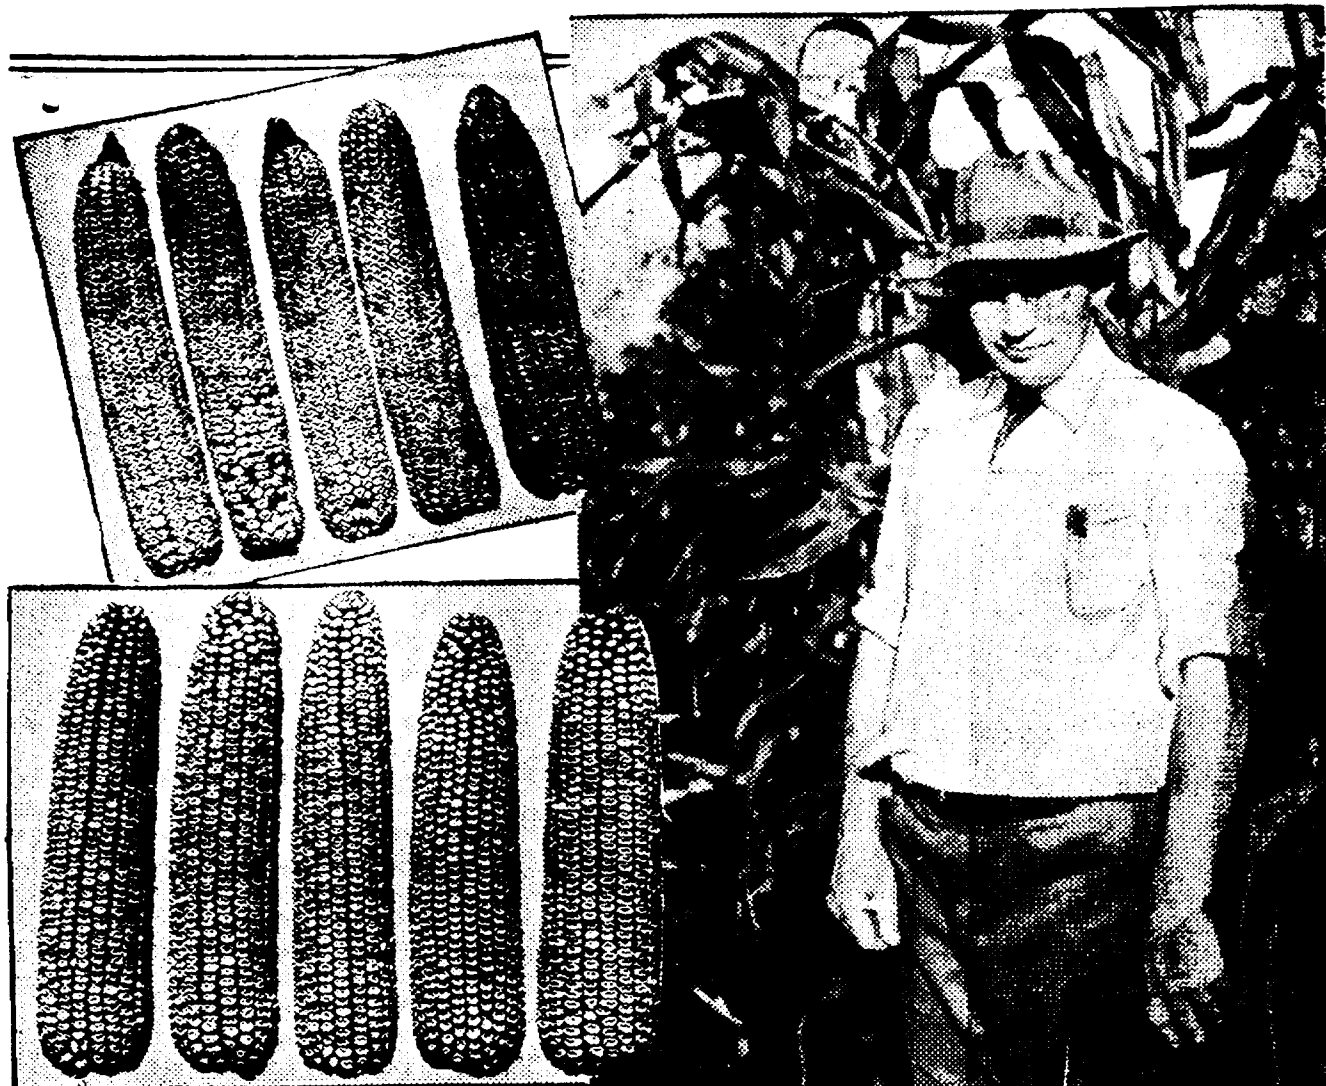

May Boost Figures

Judgment rendered by independents on election day next November probably will determine whether Mr. Roosevelt shall remain in the White House or surrender the keys. The least expected by anti-New Dealers from the November poll is an increase in Republican house and senate membership.

This third anniversary of bleak and blustery March 4, 1933, finds Mr. Roosevelt possessing some advantage in the presidential sweepstakes but far from the long-odds favorite he appeared to be 18 months ago.

National polls suggest an abrupt slump in Mr. Roosevelt's popularity. In 1932 he carried all but six states; Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut. The 1934 off-year election was a Democratic triumph and a shattering reverse to the Republican party. But a winter straw vote test of sentiment this year discovered only 12 states in which a majority

Finds Corn That Thrives in Frost, Worth Millions to Midwest Farmer

The upper ears of corn in the picture are from a cold-susceptible strain, the lower ears from a cold-resistant strain. Note how the lower ears show a better filling out of tips and that the kernels are better developed.

Dr. J. R. Holbert, corn investigator, is making marked progress in the development of strains resistant to low temperatures.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., March 4.—

Blizzards may rage in the states of the corn belt, and it may seem a far cry from snow-covered fields or flooded areas to planting time, but Dr. J. R. Holbert, nationally-known corn breeder here is making his plans for the coming season. And it is no mere coincidence that these plans include the further study of strains of corn which will "fight frost."

Dr. Holbert, an agronomist with the United States department of agriculture, and a graduate of Purdue university, spends his winter months tabulating data on corn experiments conducted on the fertile lands of this region. On the basis of the performance of hundreds of strains, he carefully selects his material for another season, discarding strains he regards of little value and retaining those with a creditable record.

Like You and You and You Outstanding among Dr. Holbert's accomplishments is the development of strains of corn which are resistant to low temperatures. Years of work with corn have convinced him that one of the decisive needs of the corn-growing states is a corn which can run the gauntlet of low temperatures and early frosts. The fact that fall frosts are frequently followed by weeks of persons polled for the New Deal.

Government spending and continued unemployment are at the top of any list of anti-Roosevelt campaign issues. Data on the jobless is faulty but it is assumed upwards of 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 employable persons still lack jobs provided by private capital. Federal spending and a series of unbalanced budgets beginning in 1931 when Mr. Hoover still was in the White House have unnerved a large and influential element of the business community and led to threats and fears of currency or credit inflation.

of excellent corn growing weather, emphasizes the need for just the kind of work he is carrying out. "Strains of corn are much like folk," says Dr. Holbert. "Some have good traits and some are not blessed with any qualities of outstanding value. Some strains of corn will do fairly well during a good season, but let cold temperatures, extreme heat, drought or other hard conditions come, and they fail to make the grade. Corn breeders must find strains which are best adapted to various conditions and propagate them further."

Dr. Holbert, many years ago, had observed that there seemed to be rather wide variations in the behavior of corn in the fall, when the first cold snap came on. Some plants seemed to be nearly ruined, while others kept right on growing. He believed that those differences offered an opportunity in the creation for what he calls "cold resistant strains."

Uses Ice Box in Field In order to arrive more quickly at results, this corn breeder perfected a portable field refrigerator.

Moving this refrigerator from place to place in the corn test plots, Dr. Holbert would sit it down over four hills of corn. These hills represented different strains. With the refrigerator in place he could subject the corn plants to different degrees of temperature for various periods. He discovered that some strains of corn are injured by temperatures of 34 to 38 degrees F., or even as high as 40 degrees F. These represent susceptible strains. Other strains showed an almost uncanny resistance to cold. They may be exposed to temperatures of from 28 to 32 degrees F. for a limited time without apparent injury.

It is not uncommon for visitors to Dr. Holbert's plots, even in the early part of September, following cold spells, to see some rather interesting proofs of the differences in the resistance of strains of corn to low temperatures. Side by side will be noted corn green and growing, and corn practically dead.

Millions for Farmers "If a strain of corn can get by the first cold spell and have two or three weeks of warm drying weather, it is probable that such a strain will yield several bushels more per acre than a strain which succumbs at the low temperature," Dr. Holbert says. "Development of strains resistant to cold may mean millions of dollars to the corn belt, especially in what we term 'soft corn' years."

Dr. Holbert's cold resistant strains did not just happen. In most cases they are the result of a comprehensive program of breeding, involving first the development of inbred strains, and then the crossing of these inbreds. The work requires time, patience and the ability to note variations.

Dr. Holbert has been seeking cold weather corn with other desirable qualities. His experimental work has shown that cold resistance in the spring and fall and heat and drought resistance in summer can be combined in the same strains. He finds that strains which are decidedly more resistant to stalk breaking than are strains whose stalks and leaves are killed by the first cold temperatures.

Physical tests have showed that school children in Baltimore are weaker in arm and shoulder muscles than groups tested in some other cities; as a result, physical exercises to develop these muscles are being emphasized.

STATE HIGHWAY LOSS MILLIONS

Jaster Blames Zero Weather for Damage to Roads

COLUMBUS, March 4.—(UP)—Ohio highway's were damaged nearly $3,000,000 by the recent zero weather, John Jaster, jr., state highway director, estimated today.

"The highway department is faced with the greatest problem in its history because of hundreds of cave-ins on roads throughout the state," he said. The undersurface of the highways was frozen several feet deep and, after a slight thaw had softened up the upper foot or so, trucks and other heavy vehicles caused the cave-ins, Jaster explained.

Crews of workmen from the maintenance division of the department are working daily to repair the damage, Jaster said.

OHIOANS GAINED UNDER AAA PLAN

Over 15 Millions Received During its Duration

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(UP)—Ohio farmers and hog raisers were enriched by $15,210,318 during 1935 under the now outlawed Agricultural Adjustment Administration program, a report issued by the AAA comptroller showed today.

Ohioans participated in four of the seven adjustment programs under which $586,821,074 was paid in rental and benefits throughout the country.

Corn-hog benefits to Ohioans amounted during the year to $11,454,328. Other payments including $2,070,240 to wheat growers, $1,028,817 to tobacco raisers and $646,933 to sugar-beet producers.

Administrative expenses in Ohio during the year amounted to $555,617, making the cost of the AAA program in the state to $15,765,935.

Ohio payments struck an approximate balance with collections from processors to finance the cost of the program. Internal revenue bureau reports showed collections of $16,241,633 from Ohio processors during the fiscal year 1935. Additional funds were impounded under court orders and such collections will be returned to the processor under the supreme court's decision invalidating the tax.

Three Ohio counties received more than a half million dollars each under last year's program. Darke-co led the list with $633,359, Preble was second with $568,701 and Pickaway third with $501,807.

Fascist Regime for Paraguay?

In a revolution in Paraguay lasting only two hours, army leaders forced the resignation of President Eusebio Ayala, above, and nominated as his successor the man he had exiled only two weeks previously—Colonel Rafael Franco. Colonel Franco was the hero of the Chaco war with Bolivia. President Ayala fled to Villa Concepcion, where it was reported he was arrested. Colonel Franco had been exiled because he was charged with plotting a revolution. Observers wonder whether the upset means a Fascist dictatorship for Paraguay.

VOICE ...of the... PEOPLE

Circleville, Ohio.
March 4, 1936.
Editor, Circleville Herald.
Circleville, Ohio.

Dear Sir:
I imagine I was not the only person who was shocked to know for how little our teachers work. I agree with "Interested Citizen" that "Now is the time for us all to come to the aid of our schools."

The Board of Education is elected to voice the wishes of the people. Surely it is the wish of we parents that our children should receive the best instruction it is possible for us to pay for. It is incredible that we ask them to teach for $80 a month.

How can we expect them to be well-trained if they have scarcely a living wage?

I should think the board would be grateful for the Foundation money. Perhaps more of our teachers would enroll at summer schools if they could afford it.

Most earnestly I exhort the Board to give our children better-trained teachers by enabling them to continue their education.

By all means, let us urge the board to accept the state aid.

Sincerely Yours,
"MOTHER."

Sunday School class of the Presbyterian church will meet at the home of Miss Louise Wood on Thursday evening, March 5. A splendid program will be presented and a good attendance is urged.

OPINIONS DIFFER AS FOURTH YEAR WITH FDR BEGINS

Millions for Farmers

"If a strain of corn can get by the first cold spell and have two or three weeks of warm drying weather, it is probable that such a strain will yield several bushels more per acre than a strain which succumbs at the low temperature," Dr. Holbert says. "Development of strains resistant to cold may mean millions of dollars to the corn belt, especially in what we term 'soft corn' years."

Dr. Holbert has been seeking cold weather corn with other desirable qualities. His experimental work has shown that cold resistance in the spring and fall and heat and drought resistance in summer can be combined in the same strains. He finds that strains which are decidedly more resistant to stalk breaking than are strains whose stalks and leaves are killed by the first cold temperatures.

Physical tests have showed that school children in Baltimore are weaker in arm and shoulder muscles than groups tested in some other cities; as a result, physical exercises to develop these muscles are being emphasized.

OHIOANS GAINED UNDER AAA PLAN

Over 15 Millions Received During its Duration

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(UP)—Ohio farmers and hog raisers were enriched by $15,210,318 during 1935 under the now outlived Agricultural Adjustment Administration program, a report issued by the AAA comptroller showed today.

Ohioans participated in four of the seven adjustment programs under which $586,821,074 was paid in rental and benefits throughout the country.

Corn-hog benefits to Ohioans amounted during the year to $11,454,328. Other payments including $2,070,240 to wheat growers, $1,028,817 to tobacco raisers and $646,933 to sugar-beet producers.

Administrative expenses in Ohio during the year amounted to $555,617, making the cost of the AAA program in the state to $15,765,935.

Ohio payments struck an approximate balance with collections from processors to finance the cost of the program. Internal revenue bureau reports showed collections of $16,241,633 from Ohio processors during the fiscal year 1935. Additional funds were impounded under court orders and such collections will be returned to the processor under the supreme court's decision invalidating the tax.

Three Ohio counties received more than a half million dollars each under last year's program. Darke-co led the list with $633,359, Preble was second with $568,701 and Pickaway third with $501,807.

GYPSIES BARRED BY POSSE

SAN FRANCISCO.—(UP)—Gypsies did not even rank with hoboes in California. Nineteen carloads who arrived in Tehama-co from Oregon, instead of being merely met by the Los Angeles "foreign legion," were met with a local posse armed with sawed-off shot-guns and escorted out of the county.

Fascist Regime for Paraguay?

In a revolution in Paraguay lasting only two hours, army leaders forced the resignation of President Eusebio Ayala, above, and nominated as his successor the man he had exiled only two weeks previously—Colonel Rafael Franco. Colonel Franco was the hero of the Chaco war with Bolivia. President Ayala fled to Villa Concepcion, where it was reported he was arrested. Colonel Franco had been exiled because he was charged with plotting a revolution. Observers wonder whether the upset means a Fascist dictatorship for Paraguay.

VOICE ...of the... PEOPLE

Circleville, Ohio.

Editor, Circleville Herald.
Circleville, Ohio.

Dear Sir:

I imagine I was not the only person who was shocked to know for how little our teachers work. I agree with "Interested Citizen." "Now is the time for us all to come to the aid of our schools."

The Board of Education is elected to voice the wishes of the people. Surely it is the wish of we parents that our children should receive the best instruction it is possible for us to pay for. It is incredible that we ask them to teach for $80 a month.

How can we expect them to be well-trained if they have scarcely a living wage?

I should think the board would be grateful for the Foundation money. Perhaps more of our teachers would enroll at summer schools if they could afford it.

Most earnestly I exhort the Board to give our children better-trained teachers by enabling them to continue their education.

By all means, let us urge the board to accept the state aid.

Sincerely Yours,
"MOTHER."

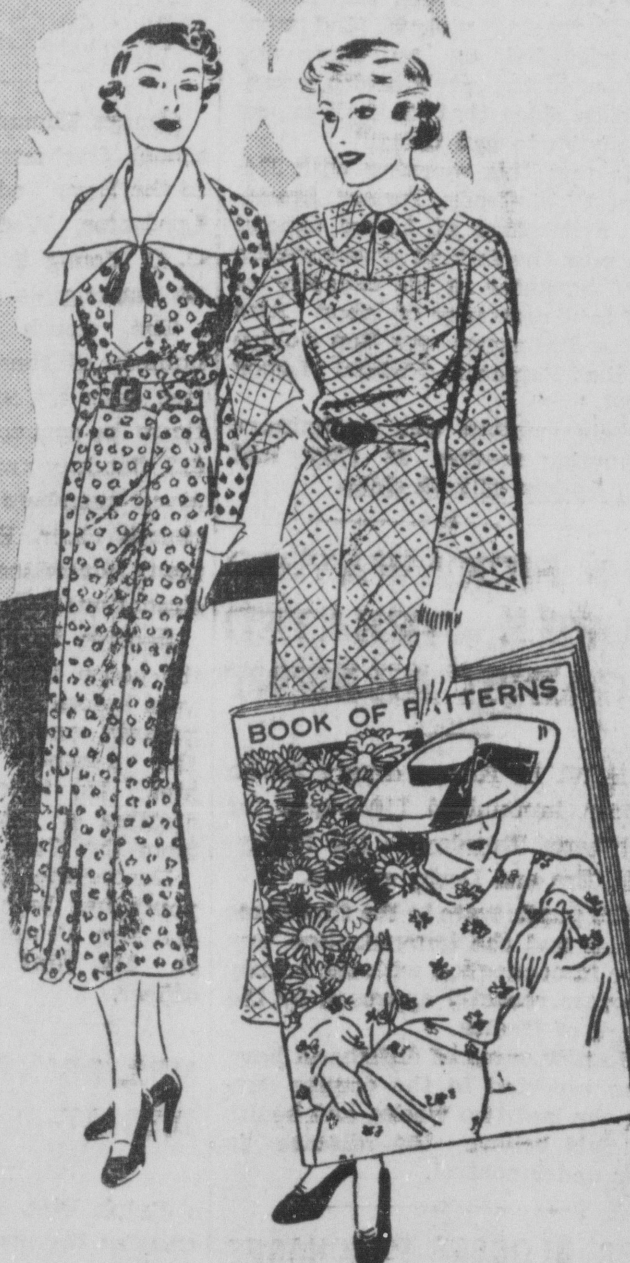

Sunday School class of the Presbyterian church will meet at the home of Miss Louise Wood on Thursday evening, March 5. A splendid program will be presented and a good attendance is urged.

Building Service Strike Causes New Yorkers to Climb and Climb

Union's "flying squadron" ready to go. When the feet give out—

SPREAD of the walkout of building service employees in New York City, which tied up more than 800 buildings and called out 71,000 union elevator operators and other workers, was feared as the strikers rejected Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia's first arbitration proposals. Despite the paralyzed situation and a state of emergency declared by Mayor La Guardia the situation had its humorous angles. New Yorkers had to walk up and down many flights of stairs. For instance, Mrs. Geraldine Goldin, at the right, found that climbing the stairs to her office was too much, so a fellow worker played the gallant act and carried her up. So-called reserve "flying squadrons", groups of strikers who dashed here and there calling out more workers, assembled in the union's headquarters, left, as the union stood fast on its demands for a closed shop and a wage increase of approximately $2 a week. Wages have been $70 to $90 a month, with virtually unrestricted hours.

NATIONS HOPING IL DUCE TO HEED PLEA FOR PEACE

Committee Meets to Study
Oil Embargo; Note Forwarded to Selassie

GENEVA, March 4.—(UP)—Hope arose among League of Nations leaders today that Premier Benito Mussolini might heed their plea to begin negotiations to end his war against Ethiopia.

Twenty-four hours ago they expressed belief that Mussolini would scorn any proposal to talk peace within the framework of the league.

Since then French official sources have "reason to believe" that Mussolini will agree to talk peace, provided no pressure is brought on him.

Guarding against the possibility that Mussolini might refuse to talk peace on terms acceptable to league nations, the league's committee of 18, called the general staff, which has charge of the penalties problem, met today to consider application of an oil embargo. They authorized a committee of experts under Marté R. Gomez of Mexico to make recommendations regarding the best manner of not only an embargo against the exportation of oil to Italy but a ban on the use of ships of league members in which to transport oil for Italy.

Reply by Tuesday

In its plea to Ethiopia and Italy to talk peace, the league council, sitting as the "committee of 13" without Italy, asked for a reply by next Tuesday. The committee will meet then to hear the replies.

ADDIS ABABA, March 4.—(UP)—A League of Nations appeal for peaceful settlement of the Italian-Ethiopian war arrived today and was forwarded to Emperor Haile Selassie at Dessaye, his war headquarters.

The appeal was suspected here to be merely another effort to delay imposition of effective penalties against Italy and it was forecast that the emperor would reply in general terms, pointing out that he was always ready for peace within the framework of the league, with the stipulation that the Italians withdraw to their legal frontiers.

NATIONS HOPING IL DUCE TO HEED PLEA FOR PEACE

Committee Meets to Study
Oil Embargo; Note Forwarded to Selassie

GENEVA, March 4.—(UP)—Hope arose among League of Nations leaders today that Premier Benito Mussolini might heed their plea to begin negotiations to end his war against Ethiopia. Twenty-four hours ago they expressed belief that Mussolini would scorn any proposal to talk peace within the framework of the league.

Since then French official sources have "reason to believe" that Mussolini will agree to talk peace, provided no pressure is brought on him.

Guarding against the possibility that Mussolini might refuse to talk peace on terms acceptable to league nations, the league's committee of 18, called the general staff, which has charge of the penalties problem, met today to consider application of an oil embargo. They authorized a committee of experts under Marte R. Gomez of Mexico to make recommendations regarding the best manner of not only an embargo against the exportation of oil to Italy but a ban on the use of ships of league members in which to transport oil for Italy.

Reply by Tuesday

In its plea to Ethiopia and Italy to talk peace, the league council, sitting as the "committee of 13" without Italy, asked for a reply by next Tuesday. The committee will meet then to hear the replies.

ADDIS ABABA, March 4 —(UP)—A League of Nations appeal for peaceful settlement of the Italian-Ethiopian war arrived today and was forwarded to Emperor Haile Selassie at Dessye, his war headquarters.

The appeal was suspected here to be merely another effort to delay imposition of effective penalties against Italy and it was forecast that the emperor would reply in general terms, pointing out that he was always ready for peace within the framework of the league, with the stipulation that the Italians withdraw to their legal frontiers.

A CLOAK FOR RACKETEERS

THE prospect of profit, says Senator Nye, who is well informed on armaments and collateral issues, is the largest and most provoking cause of war on this earth today. His statement may or may not be one of exact truth. It has, however, a sufficient factual basis to justify its acceptance as an important piece of information and as a warning to look for the profit motive when talk of war arises.

Senator Nye's charge that agitation for the strengthening of national defenses is often a cloak for arms racketeers is no longer open to question. The records prove that the crusades of so-called patriotic societies for development of the military and naval establishments have to a large extent been financed by ship-builders and other armaments producers. Their motives are open to justifiable suspicion.

There also is substance for Senator Nye's charge that "these racketeers go forth bribing public officials, frightening nations" and capitalizing the fears created by their own unscrupulous practices. Furthermore, there are the performances of "Bugs Drum" Shearer, who deliberately set out to wreck the naval conference of several years ago, to prove that they do their utmost to prepare the scene for war.

Obviously, the country must have available the means of defense. The solution of the problem lies in the elimination of construction of its own ships and production of its own armaments and munitions. The munitions industry, through its lawless methods, has forfeited the right to a consideration of its interests.

COMMITTEE FINDS LABOR WORSE

PROBABLY the most important question arising out of the termination of the NRA is whether its demise has brought an increase in sweated labor.

To answer this question, the President appointed a committee of experts. It was to study the pay scales and work-hours, and what changes had taken place in them since the end of the Blue Eagle.

A few weeks ago, the committee brought in its report. It showed a general lengthening of hours, slashing of pay, and a very considerable increase in child labor.

The report was sent to the White House, where it fell into the hands of Marvin McIntyre. That was the nearest it got to the President. McIntyre sent it to his good friend "Uncle Dan" Roper. He took one look, then ducked.

Several days went by and Major George Beery, Coordinator for Industrial Recovery, got wind of the report. He made inquiries at the Labor Department, expecting that it would be sent there as the agency directly concerned with such matters.

The Labor Department informed Berry it had not received the report, that McIntyre had taken it upon himself to send it to Roper.

EVASIVE ROPER

SO BERRY went direct to the President, and asked to be allowed to see the document. The President assured him he could do so, that he would give instructions to this effect.

A week went by and nothing was heard from Roper. Then a newsman, tipped off about the report, asked Roper about it.

"Oh," he replied airily, "it is unimportant."

Administrators interested in seeing that the report is made public, felt otherwise. They went to Representative Connery of the House Labor Committee, and told him the story.

"That is just the material I need to help me put over my thirty-hour bill," he said. "I'll get it."

Whether he does remains to be seen. He has written Roper a letter requesting the report. If Roper refuses to come across, Connery plans to offer a resolution in the House putting the Secretary of Commerce on the spot.

The tourist camp business is looking up. Official records show a total of 16,411 now in existence and several hundred new ones slated for construction this spring.

"YES!" Thora looked up from her book, as a smart tapping sounded on the panel of her sitting room door. "Come in."

The door opened slowly and the bronze waves of Dorothy Steele's hair gleamed in the lamplight. Her red lips widened in a friendly smile, as she said hastily:

"Please don't get up, Miss Dahl. Are you busy for a few moments?"

"Of course not," Thora managed, watching her visitor close the door and glide gracefully to an easy chair. She decided at once that she would let Mrs. Steele take the initiative.

"Such a cozy little place you have here," Dorothy's eyes were traveling about the small room. She crossed her knees and swung one of her small white-shod feet nervously back and forth. "I used to come up here frequently and chat with dear Mrs. Myron."

"Yes?"

"Yes, and I have been trying to get a chance to become acquainted with you. So far, all I've had is a glimpse of you. I know how busy you must be, getting your hand on things. Mr. Marsh feels that he was very fortunate in securing your services. Mrs. Myron was here for so many years that it makes it difficult for anyone to fill her place."

Thora made no rejoinder. Mrs. Steele's eyes ceased their roving and regarded the new housekeeper with half-veiled curiosity.

"I was so interested when Selwyn . . . I mean Mr. Marsh . . . told me that you had been a school teacher. I shall have to confess that I asked him how you happened to be looking for a position like this, but he insisted that he didn't know. Men are different from us that way, aren't they?" Her white teeth flashed a smile.

"They seem to be," Thora admitted. Then Mr. Marsh had not repeated her story. A warm little feeling of gratitude welled in her heart. That was kind of him. But Mrs. Steele was hurrying on with:

"You modern girls are beyond me. It seems that there isn't anything at all you won't do for a thrill. I have had real first-hand experience, you know . . . with dear Wilma. She is just the same as my other child. Of course she has told you that."

Wilma had made no confidences of that nature, but Thora contented herself with a nod and smile. She felt that the purpose of this visit had not yet been revealed.

"Yes, indeed," Mrs. Steele resumed. "I've tried to be a mother to Wilma ever since she was a baby. Her mother was the dearest friend I ever had. Please understand . . . Mr. Marsh has given that girl every advantage, everything she has ever wanted. But, after all, he is a man. And so absorbed in his own affairs. The poor girl's childhood would have been rather tragic if it had not been situated so that I could look after her to some extent."

Thora thought she remembered that Mrs. Myron had told her that "Dottie Steele's" intensive motherhood complex was of recent origin. All she said was:

"Miss Marsh was very fortunate in having you."

"I have done my best," the caller remarked pensively. "I hope that

DIET AND HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE MAY divide the human race into three classes. Let us call one the "normal" or "average" pattern. This type goes through life in an orderly manner, mixing his acts in about equal proportion between those that are inspired by reason and emotion. His life is a mixture of staid, sober actions, conforming to the conventional pattern of the particular strata of society to which he belongs, but at times given to flights of fancy; to the performance of silly, ridiculous, illogical or actually harmful things, but nearly always with enough common sense to bring himself "back to earth" before going beyond his depth in flights of emotional stimulus. In other words, he is able to "keep both feet on the ground."

Then there are two extremes from this average or normal pattern, the "emotionalist" and the "phlegmatic." Probably the most unpopular individual in the world is the extremely phlegmatic one, who apparently never has a thought beyond satisfying the most elemental urges.

The emotionalist, on the other hand, goes through life with a constant fever of mental activity, his emotions being constantly in a state of flux.

What We Would Choose
If we were free to choose the ideal type of personality for ourselves and our friends we would endow ourselves and our friends with generosity, a sense of humor, personal integrity, enough emotionalism to enjoy the pleasures of life, and couple this with enough sober sense to be serious and practical about the duties pertaining to making a living.

Such an ideal state would eliminate a large per cent of the business of the physician, because so many human ills are directly attributable to an unstable nervous system. It is really remarkable how many complaints, when examined carefully, result in no organic findings. The cause of the symptoms must be put down as emotional.

Functional diseases represent only a disturbance in physiology or function with no demonstrable changes in the organs themselves. The patient may be just as sick and miserable, or even more so, than if an organic disease is present.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. A. SHEPHERD, Famous Bridge Teacher

ATROCIOUS STRATEGY

LIKE OTHER PEOPLE, bridge players often have obsessions, some of them expensive, others annoying to partner. West's particular obsession was a bit of abominable strategy which again and again I have seen cost game and rubber, just as it did with the deal shown below.

♠ K J 10 4
♥ Q 8 2
♦ A K Q 8 2
♣ 10

♠ A 6
♥ A J 10 8
♦ 7 6 4
♣ 9 8 5 3

♠ 9 7 6 3 2
♥ 7 5 4
♦ None
♣ K Q J 6

Bidding went: North, 1-Diamond; third hand; East, 1-Heart; South, 1-Spade; North, not at all certain of his partner's bidding, 2-Diamonds for safety; South, 3-Clubs; North, 4-Spades.

Of course West should have led the K of the suit his partner had named. Had he done this East would have played the 10 of hearts, to urge further leads of the suit, resulting in giving defenders 3 heart tricks, as well as a club trick and a trump trick. Only North and South were vulnerable. Putting them down 200 points would have been very satisfactory to East.

Instead of laying down the K of hearts, West went into a trance-like study of the bidding. As South had shown both black suits West's multi-headed conclusion was that East must hold diamond strength (even if West held 5 cards of the suit and North had rebid diamonds). The J of diamonds finally was led. On the three top diamonds in dummy dealer placed his head whirled. Only when South ruffed the heart led did East realize just what partner had done. Of course defenders finally were given a single club trick.

Bridge obsessions of various kinds are more common than might be thought. Leading blindly the suit bid by dummy is one of the most annoying and expensive mental quirks. Leading through strength in a general run, but that does not mean leading through very great strength, as that sometimes affords declarer an opportunity to obtain an immediate discard of discards. At other times it assists declarer establish dummy's long suit, to obtain later discards. Making an opening trump lead, without just cause, is another annoying trick, as well as a club trick and a trump trick. Only North and South were vulnerable. Putting them down 200 points would have been very satisfactory to East.

RELIEF

Relief actions, however, are not of first water.

Huge sums, of course, will be needed for relief.

That will give Republicans renewed opportunity to say what they think of the relief administration.

It is probable that it would be as bad under Republican as Democratic administration. At least, the general public has no illusion concerning that.

Such arguments are beating around the bush, anyway. Both the public on and off relief are dissatisfied. Even with the best of relief administration, relief is no remedy. With an inefficient administration, it is tragedy.

What can be done to get men off relief, to put them to work?

Alas, congress never will discuss that.

That means a change of the economic system.

COMMITTEE FINDS LABOR WORSE

PROBABLY the most important question arising out of the termination of the NRA is whether its demise has brought an increase in sweated labor.

To answer this question, the President appointed a committee of experts. It was to study the pay scales and work-hours, and what changes had taken place in them since the end of the Blue Eagle.

A few weeks ago, the committee brought in its report. It showed a general lengthening of hours, slashing of pay, and a very considerable increase in child labor.

The report was sent to the White House, where it fell into the hands of Marvin McIntyre. That was the nearest it got to the President. McIntyre sent it to his good friend "Uncle Dan" Roper. He took one look, then ducked.

Several days went by and Major George Beery, Coordinator for Industrial Recovery, got wind of the report. He made inquiries at the Labor Department, expecting that it would be sent there as the agency directly concerned with such matters.

The Labor Department informed Berry it had not received the report, that McIntyre had taken it upon himself to send it to Roper.

EVASIVE ROPER

SO BERRY went direct to the President, and asked to be allowed to see the document. The President assured him he could do so, that he would give instructions to this effect.

A week went by and nothing was heard from Roper. Then a newsman, tipped off about the report, asked Roper about it.

"Oh," he replied airily, "it is unimportant."

Administrationites interested in seeing that the report is made public, felt otherwise. They went to Representative Connery of the House Labor Committee, and told him the story.

"That is just the material I need to help me put over my thirty-hour bill," he said. "I'll get it."

Whether he does remains to be seen. He has written Roper a letter requesting the report. If Roper refuses to come across, Connery plans to offer a resolution in the House putting the Secretary of Commerce on the spot.

CHAPTER 28

"YES?" Thora looked up from her book, as a smart tapping sounded on the panel of her sitting room door. "Come in."

The door opened slowly and the bronze waves of Dorothy Steele's hair gleamed in the lamplight. Her red lips widened in a friendly smile, as she said hastily:

"Please don't get up, Miss Dahl. Are you busy for a few moments?"

"Of course not," Thora managed, watching her visitor close the door and glide gracefully to an easy chair. She decided at once that she would let Mrs. Steele take the initiative.

"Such a cozy little place you have here," Dorothy's eyes were traveling about the small room. She crossed her knees and swung one of her small white-shod feet nervously back and forth. "I used to come up here frequently and chat with dear Mrs. Myron."

"Yes?" "Yes, and I have been trying to get a chance to become acquainted with you. So far, all I've had is a glimpse of you. . . . I know how busy you must be, getting your hand on things. Mr. Marsh feels that he was very fortunate in securing your services. Mrs. Myron was here for so many years that it makes it difficult for anyone to fill her place."

Thora made no rejoinder. Mrs. Steele's eyes ceased their roving and regarded the new housekeeper with half-veiled curiosity.

"I was so interested when Selwyn . . . I mean Mr. Marsh . . . told me that you had been a school teacher. I shall have to confess that I asked him how you happened to be looking for a position like this, but he insisted that he didn't know. Men are different from us that way, aren't they?" Her white teeth flashed a smile.

"They seem to be," Thora admitted. Then Mr. Marsh had not repeated her story. A warm little feeling of gratitude welled up in her heart. That was kind of him. But Mrs. Steele was hurrying on with: "You modern girls are beyond me. It seems that there isn't anything at all you won't do for a thrill. I have had real first-hand experience, you know . . . with dear Wilma. She is just the same as my own child. Of course she has told you that."

Wilma had made no confidences of that nature, but Thora contented herself with a nod and smile. She felt that the purpose of this visit had not yet been revealed.

"Yes, indeed," Mrs. Steele resumed. "I've tried to be a mother to Wilma ever since she was a baby. Her mother was the dearest friend I ever had. Please understand . . . Mr. Marsh has given that girl every advantage, everything she has ever wanted. But, after all, he is a man. And so absorbed in his own affairs. The poor girl's childhood would have been rather tragic, if I had not been situated so that I could look after her to some extent."

Thora thought she remembered that Mrs. Myron had told her that "Dottie Steele's" intensive motherhood complex was of recent origin. All she said was: "Miss Marsh was very fortunate in having you."

"I have done my best," the caller remarked pensively. "I hope that

"You modern girls are beyond me."

Wilma is going to be very happy now." She looked sharply at Thora. "Of course you know who this guest . . . Mr. Babbs . . . is?"

"Miss Marsh told me."

"And isn't it quite the most romantic thing you ever heard of? I was so surprised when the dear child told me that her friendship with Mr. Babbs had . . . you know. One of those sudden affairs. If it was any other girl, I would be afraid she might have been swept off her feet. But Wilma is very mature . . . that way. It really was a very complete surprise to her father and me."

Mrs. Steele laughed merrily, then lowered her voice to a more confidential pitch.

"Yes, indeed. Quite a surprise. Selwyn and I both thought that some day Wilma would marry Sherman Gordon. He always has been like a big brother to her. Really. Perhaps they knew each other too well for anything serious to come of it . . . you know what I mean. And yet, I will always believe that Sherman was in love with our little girl. She insists not . . . but we older women have a way of telling about such things. But, after all, I may have been mistaken. I must say that the dear boy shows no signs of heart-break over Wilma's engagement."

"Doesn't he?" Mrs. Steele was peering so intently at her that Thora was constrained to offer the question. "Not in the least," was the laughing answer. "It doesn't take me long to recover, anyway. You probably have found that out for yourself. Sherman is a fine-looking chap . . . don't you think?"

"Very." "Not only that, but he is brilliant and . . . very wealthy." The last two words were said impressively. "He will be a very wonderful 'catch' for some lucky girl. . . ." Mrs. Steele glanced at her watch with an exclamation of dismay.

"I had no idea it was quite so late. I just ran up for a moment's chat with you while Wilma was writing a note. She will wonder what has become of me."

"It was very nice of you to call," Thora remarked politely.

"Nonsense. I've been wanting to run in and get acquainted. But what I wanted to say particularly was . . . She was standing at the door now, with one hand on the latch. "About your guest. I know that you will have your hands very full for a time."

Mr. Babbs will not be an ordinary guest, of course. I am planning a number of small affairs for him and for Wilma. She will have to do considerable entertaining, and I know what that means to a housekeeper. I know how capable you are, but I want you to feel that you can call upon me at any time for help . . . suggestions, you know. Fair Acres is just a second home to me and I'm so familiar with everything. So don't hesitate, Miss Dahl, if you need me. At any time."

She was worried about the "forks" Thora said to herself, but aloud: "That is very kind of you, Mrs. Steele."

"Then don't forget. Goodbye." Thora picked up her book once more, but, instead of reading, she sat staring thoughtfully at the lamp. She was puzzling over two things. Why had Mrs. Steele taken the trouble to call? And why had her attitude changed so completely? There was no question but that she wished to be on friendly terms. Perhaps she had changed because she had discovered that Wilma approved of the Marsh housekeeper now.

DIET AND HEALTH

Normal, Emotional, Phlegmatic Types of Men

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D. WE MAY divide the human race into three classes. Let us call one the "normal" or "average" pattern. This type goes through life in an orderly manner, mixing his acts in about equal proportions between those that are inspired by reason and emotion. His life is a mixture of staid, sober actions, conforming to the conventional pattern of the particular strata of society to which he belongs, but at times given to flights of fancy; to the performance of silly, ridiculous, illogical or actually harmful things, but nearly always with enough common sense to bring himself "back to earth" before going beyond his depth in flights of emotional stimulus. In other words, he is able to "keep both feet on the ground."

Then there are two extremes from this average or normal pattern. "The emotionalist" and "the phlegmatic." Probably the most unpopular individual in the world is the extremely phlegmatic soul, who apparently never has a thought beyond satisfying the most elemental urges. The emotionalist, on the other hand, goes through life with a constant relapsing fever of mental exuberance or despondency. He figurliterature; is either crowing like a young rooster about his mental superiority or sunk in the depths of despair.

If we were free to choose the ideal type of personality for ourselves and our friends we would endow ourselves and our friends with generosity, a sense of humor, personal integrity, enough emotionalism to enjoy the pleasures of life, and couple this with enough sober sense to be serious and practical about the duties pertaining to making a living.

Such an ideal state would eliminate a large per cent of the business of the physician, because so many human ills are directly attributable to an unstable nervous system. It is really remarkable how many complaints, when examined carefully, result in no organic findings. The cause of the symptoms must be put down as emotional.

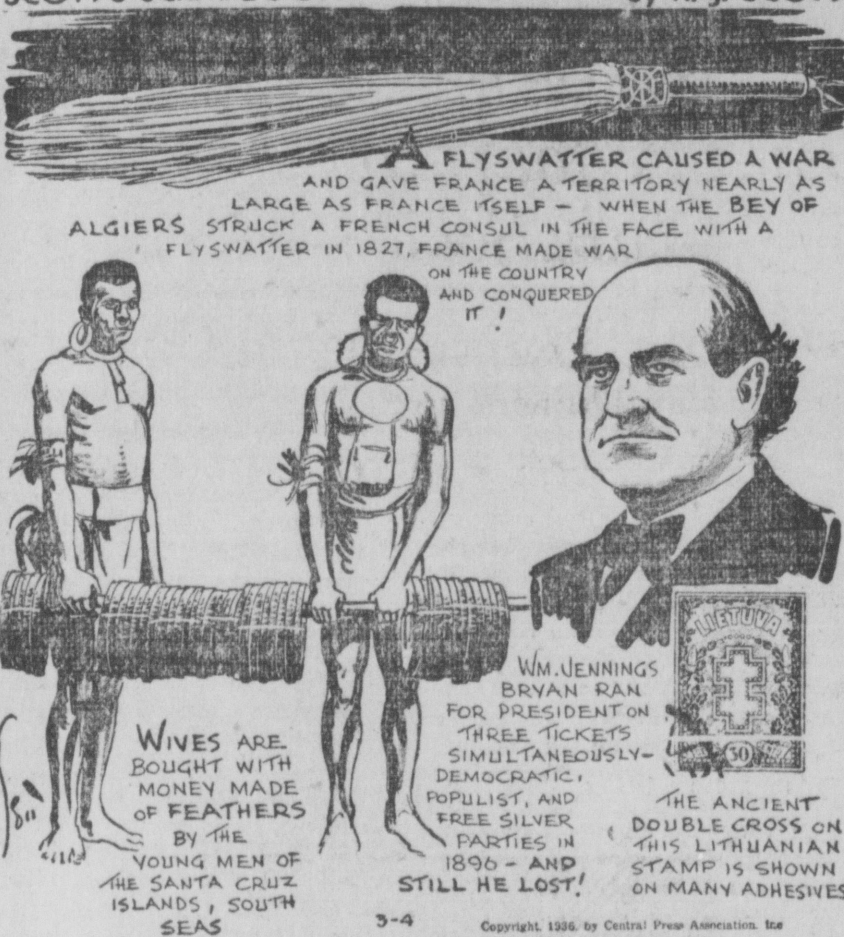

Functional diseases represent only a disturbance in physiology or function with no demonstrable changes in the organs themselves. The patient may be just as sick and miserable, or even more so, than if an organic disease is present.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. A. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

ATROCIOUS STRATEGY

LIKE OTHER PEOPLE, bridge players often have obsessions, some of them expensive, others annoying to partner. West's particular obsession was a bit of abominable strategy which again and again I have seen cost game and rubber, just as it did with the deal shown below.

♠ K J 10 4
♥ Q 8 2
♦ A K Q 8 2
♣ 10
♠ A 6

Bidding went: North, 1-Diamond, third hand; East, 1-Heart; South, 1-Spade; North, not at all certain of his partner's bidding, 2-Diamonds, for safety; South, 3-Clubs; North, 4-Spades.

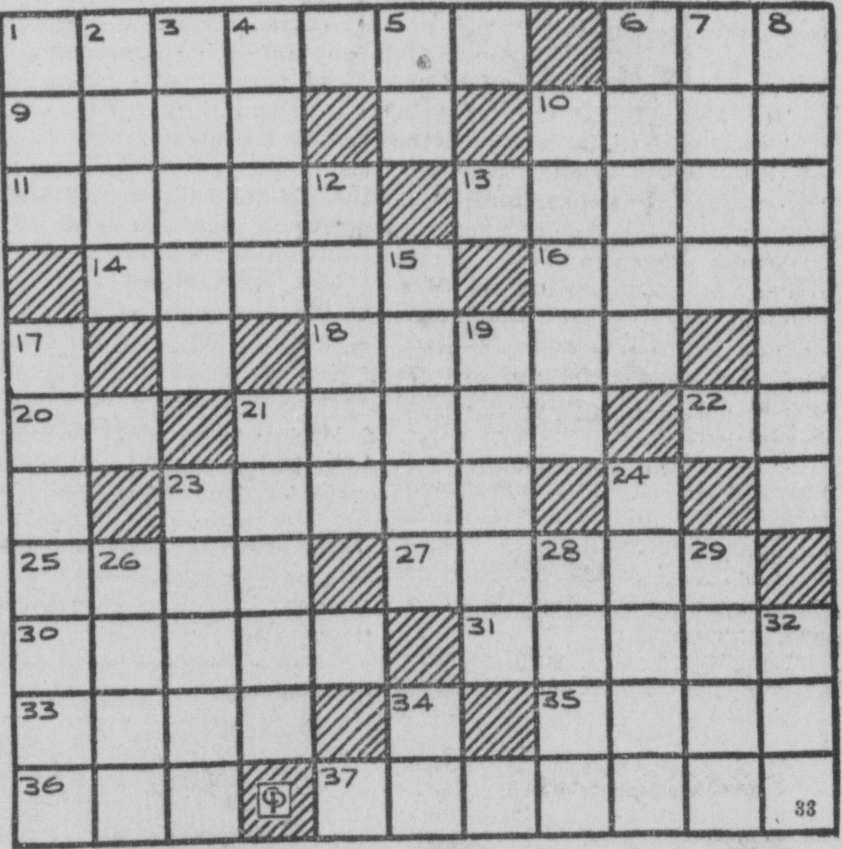

Of course West should have led the K of the suit his partner had named. Had he done this East would have played the 10 of hearts, to urge further leads of the suit, resulting in giving defenders 3 heart tricks, as well as a club trick and a trump trick. Only North and South were vulnerable. Putting them down 200 points would have been very satisfactory to East.

Instead of laying down the K of hearts, West went into a trance-like study of the bidding. As South had shown both black suits West's multheaded conclusion was that East must hold diamond strength (even if West held 5 cards of the suit and North had rebid diamonds). The J of diamonds finally was led. On the three top diamonds in dummy declarer discarded his three losing hearts. The K of spades was led from dummy. East's Ace won. He led the Ace of hearts, thinking that possibly partner might hold a singleton heart or even be void of the suit, and that South's club or spade bidding might have been intended to lure East into overbidding hearts. In fact, East was so confused by what had taken place that his head whirled. Only when South ruffed the heart led did East realize just what partner had done. Of course defenders finally were given a single club trick.

Bridge obsessions of various kinds are more common than might be thought. Leading blindly the suit bid by dummy is one of the most annoying and expensive mental quirks. Leading through strength is a general rule, but that does not mean leading through very great strength, as that sometimes affords declarer an opportunity to obtain an immediate discard of discards. At other times it assists declarer establish dummy's long suit, to obtain later discards. Making an opening trump lead, without just cause, is another annoying and frequently expensive habit of some players. Refusal to lead partner's suit at no trumps, just because declarer has bid no trumps over that suit, is very annoying to the bidder of that suit, especially when game is lost thereby.

Eighty-four at Monday Club Social Meeting

Interesting Program Follows Dinner At 6 O'Clock

The annual social session of the Monday club was enjoyed at St. Philip's Episcopal parish house Tuesday evening. The St. Patrick's Day motif of shamrocks, the top hat of the "auld sod" and "the wearin' o' the green" served as the decorative theme for the dinner for which eighty-four members were seated.

Following the dinner a pleasing and distinctive program was presented under the direction of Mrs. R. F. Lilly and her committee.

The first number was a series of musical tableaux. The costumes for this feature were striking and most appropriate for each song. Some were beautiful and some were beyond description. The numbers follow:

"When I Grow Too Old to Dream," Mrs. Ulm in retrospective mood and Mrs. Melvin Yates singing very softly.

"Annie Laurie" sung by Mrs. Clark Will with Mrs. Fred Gruner as the Scotch lassie in full costume.

"Billy Boy," Miss Mary Radcliffe singing, acted by Mrs. Barton Deming and Miss Mary Rader.

"My Alice Blue Gown," sung by Mrs. Harry Heffner, posed by Mrs. Lawrence Johnson in a lovely costume of the hoop skirt era.

"Sally in Our Alley," sung by Mrs. James P. Moffitt, Mrs. Clark Will and Mrs. Melvin Yates with Miss Martha Mader acting as Sally, the alley girl.

"In the Merry Month of May" sung by Mrs. Frank Kline Jr., posed by Mrs. Marion Lutz and Mrs. Ned Thacher.

"Silver Threads Among the Gold," Mrs. Yates singing and very beautifully posed by Mrs. W. T. Brown in a lovely old-fashioned dress of black taffeta and lace.

"School Days" sung by Mrs. Will with Mrs. Lemuel Weldon and Mrs. G. D. Phillips as the bashful, barefoot beau and lassie.

"Old Fashioned Garden" sung by Miss Radcliffe and posed by Mrs. John Eshelman and small daughter, both beautifully gowned in the elaborate costumes of the long ago.

"Sylvia," song by Mrs. Heffner, posed by Mrs. Ned Thacher.

"Top Hat," sung by Mrs. Moffitt with Mrs. Marion Lutz in the "top hat, white tie and tails."

"Mother of Mine," realistically dramatized by Mrs. Kline and her mother Mrs. Lilly.

"Two Little Girls in Blue," the adorable twins of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Huston with Mrs. Yates singing.

"Waltz Me Around Again Willie," Mrs. Orion King and Mrs. Deming doing just that—Mrs. Deming as Willie, song by Mrs. Will. Mrs. King's costume deserves special mention, it being a classic of that period.

"I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard," Miss Radcliffe singing with Mrs. Huston and Mrs. Weldon as the quarrelling little girls.

"Boots and Saddles," song by Mrs. Heffner with Miss Ann Bennett, unshared.

"Long Long Ago" sung by Mrs. Moffitt with Mrs. Bishop Given as

AS SPRING NEARS

Here Are Some Model Suggestions for Wear if You're a Little Tired of Your Winter Clothes

Left, shantung poplin with woolen coffee bean buttons; center, two-piece plaid linen; right, pre-shrunk cotton frock with separate scarf.

TIED OF your winter clothes? Longing for something "in-between" as the seasons change? Then these three models ought to strike a responsive chord. They are designed for home wear now and will be equally attractive when summer comes.

Not so many years ago "home frocks" were just that—dresses to be worn while performing house-keeping chores, and afterwards when company was not expected.

At left is a new fabric-shantung poplin, adorned with so many wooden coffee-bean buttons that you won't be able to resist playing the old game of "rich man, poor man," the minute you see it. The collar and yoke effect lend an added note of smartness.

Center, that perennial harbinger of spring—plaid, in a two-piece garment. Buttons on the shoulders, pockets in the blouse and a circular skirt are its distinguishing features. The skirt is on a band.

At right, shantung cotton in white holds the stage. It's a tailored-model suitable for home wear, golf course or shopping. The separate scarf is in contrasting color.

AS SPRING NEARS

TIRED OF your winter clothes? Longing for something "in-between" as the seasons change? Then these three models ought to strike a responsive chord. They are designed for home wear now and will be equally attractive when summer comes.

Not so many years ago "home frocks" were just that—dresses to be worn while performing house-keeping chores, and afterwards when company was not expected. At left is a new fabric-shantung poplin, adorned with so many wooden coffee-bean buttons that you won't be able to resist playing the old game of "rich man, poor man," the minute you see it. The collar and yoke effect lend an added note of smartness.

Center, that perennial harbinger of spring—plaid, in a two-piece garment. Buttons on the shoulders, pockets in the blouse and a circular skirt are its distinguishing features. The skirt is on a band.

At right, shantung cotton in white holds the stage. It's a tailored model suitable for home wear, golf course or shopping. The separate scarf is in contrasting color.

Broadcast Outlasts War By Five Months; Script Readers Run Out of Material Though Interest is High

HAVING OUTLASTED by five months the war which furnished the background, "Roses and Drums", Civil War air opus will be completed in late March.

The Civil War began in July, 1861, ended in April, 1865, that's three years and 10 months, approximately. In late March "Roses and Drums" will have been on the air, almost continuously, for four years and three months.

Interest in this long-run air show is still keen but the script writers have run out of material pertaining to the war. A number of actors who have appeared in the air drama have since died.

Appeal for Hearers

AMERICAN and European broadcasting stations are drawing on each other for listener entertainment, with increasing frequency. One American network announces that in a recent month it played 50 programs across the Atlantic and brought to American ears broadcasts from 23 national stations.

The same month the network reached the American audience to the late King George V, the King of the Belgians, singing in Copenhagen, Christmas bells in Bethlehem, and music from Havana. The rumblings of erupting volcanoes Mauna Loa in Hawaii.

"Snooney" Popular

THOSE LISTENERS who have become fond of "Snooney" of the Fred Waring orchestra and believe he to be a tiny, precocious school child may be surprised to hear that "Snooney" is soon to become Mrs. Paul Garrett of New York. "Snooney" is really Miss Barbara Blair.

Oddly enough, the Waring broadcasts are sponsored by one motor car manufacturer while Barrett is public relations director for a rival automobile manufacturing concern.

Radio Outlets

NOTES—Not all programs in the demand for tickets to broadcast stations are nation-wide network affairs. So eager is the public to see Zeke Manners and his hillbillies, airing over WABC, New York, that tickets are distributed more than a week in advance. A Philadelphia manufacturing company airs an amateur contest put on among its own employees on station WIP.

Singer Rogers has written a song you soon may hear—it's "I Don't Know Why You Don't Understand Me". American webs plan to carry the running of the British Grand National, the steeplechase classic annually held at Aintree, Liverpool, England. Date is March 27, just in case you hold one of those tickets. The Singing Gentleman who substitutes for the Singing Lady on the children's program is Bob Brown, regular announcer of the show. The Singing Lady (Irene Wicker) is away on a vacation of one week. After March 6 the Little Theater Off Times Square will be something of a misnomer. The show moves from New York and will be aired for several weeks from Hollywood, Cal.

In the same month the network enabled its American audience to hear the late King George V, the pope, Eskimos singing in Copenhagen, Christmas bells in Bethlehem, band music from Havana, chantings of monks in Assisi and even the rumblings of erupting volcano Mauna Loa in Hawaii.

"Snooney" Popular

THOSE LISTENERS who have become fond of "Snooney" of the Fred Waring orchestra and believe her to be a tiny, precocious school child may be surprised to hear that "Snooney" is soon to become Mrs. Paul Garrett of New York. "Snooney" is really Miss Barbara Blair.

Oddly enough, the Waring broadcasts are sponsored by one motor car manufacturer while Garrett is public relations director for a rival automobile manufacturing concern.

NOTES—Not all programs in top demand for tickets to broadcasts by listeners are nationwide network affairs. So eager is the public to see Zeke Manners and Gang, hillbillies, airing over WMAC, New York, that tickets are distributed more than a week ahead. A Philadelphia manufacturing company airs an amateur contest put on among its own employees over station WIP. Ginger Rogers has written a song you soon may hear—it's "I Don't Know Why You Don't Understand Me". American webs plan to carry the running of the British Grand National, the steeplechase classic annually held at Aintree, Liverpool, England. Date is March 27, just in case you hold one of those tickets. The Singing Gentleman who substitutes for the Singing Lady on the children's program is Bob Brown, regular announcer of the show. The Singing Lady (Irene Wicker) is away on a vacation of one week. After March 6 the Little Theater Off Times Square will be something of a misnomer. The show moves from New York and will be aired for several weeks from Hollywood, Cal.

OHIO STATE FIVE WINS 28-23 FROM NOTRE DAME FOE

Guarding of Dye and Scoring of Thomas Turns Surprise Trick in Indiana

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 4—(UP)—A measure of revenge for the stunning fourth quarter defeat Ohio State suffered at the hands of Notre Dame in football last fall was tasted by the Bucks today.

An inconsistent Ohio basketball quintet which was alternately good and bad all season, ended its campaign here last night when it turned back a heavily favored Irish five 28 to 23.

The defeat was Notre Dame's second in 22 contests this season. It broke a 13 game winning streak for the Ramblers.

Lanky Earl Thomas, Ohio State center, and "Tip" Dye, the mite guard, climaxed sterling all-season performances with brilliant play against the Irish.

Thomas scored 10 points, while Dye guarded Johnny Moir, Notre Dame's high scoring sophomore forward, and limited him to three points.

Ohio jumped into a five point lead at the outset of the contest and Notre Dame didn't score its first points until Paul Nowak came through with a long basket.

After Nowak broke the ice, the Irish rallied and at half time had pulled within one point of the Bucks, 13 to 14.

In the second half Ohio again dominated the play.

Inability of Notre Dame to convert free thrown was directly responsible for its loss. The Irish made only three out of 12, while Ohio was successful on six out of 19.

The triumph enabled the Bucks to complete their season with 12 victories and eight defeats.

EAGLES TO TAKE ACTION TOWARD ATHLETIC TEAM

An athletic committee to sponsor a program of athletics among members of Circleville Aerie, No. 85, Fraternal Order of Eagles, was named by Charles Garner, president of the Aerie, at a meeting Tuesday night.

The Eagles are to sponsor a state-wide program of athletics this year.

The local committee consists of: Nelson Garner, chairman, and H. O. Eveland, O. P. Miller, Charles Sampson, and William McLamhin.

This committee will endeavor to form a baseball team, softball team, bowling team, and other teams to represent the local Aerie of Eagles. Games will be booked with other Aeries in this district, and with independent teams throughout the seasons. At the end of each season, the athletic committee of the Ohio State Aerie of Eagles will try to arrange for state tournaments in each sport to determine state Eagle champions. Only Eagle teams will be eligible to compete in the tournaments, under rules to be drafted by the state committee.

DEAN DEMANDS $10,000 LESS THAN RICKY'S PAY

BRADENTON, Fla., March 4—Dizzy Dean, $40,000 step-child of the St. Louis Cardinals' front office, checked in at the Cards' spring headquarters today.

Ostensibly he was here to talk business with Branch Rickey, and he had a new, strong argument with which to heal his holdout troubles:

"If Branch Rickey is worth $50,000 a year to the Cards, I am worth $40,000. Rickey never drew anybody into the park, did he?"

Some free glycerine is found in nature in palm and other oils, but most of the world's glycerine supply is produced in treatments of tallow and oils to make soap.

About This And That In Many Sports

Capable Officials

Two capable officials will be in charge of the central district cage tourney Friday and Saturday at Delaware—They are Earl D. Gross of New Philadelphia and A. N. Smith of Elyria—Gross is mayor of his city and has been an arbiter in state tourneys for several years—He has again been signed to work in the state meet in Columbus—Gross' nickname is "Monk"—He starred in football and basketball when in school and matriculated at Marietta ***

Thanks to Wright

Young High by Far

Here's an angle we almost forgot in the county tourney—Chuck Young of Ashville was by far the highest scorer in the meet with 63 points in four games, an average of almost 16—His nearest competitor, of course, was Ev Landman, whose 26 in the final game gave him a total of 44—Rhodes of Pickaway tallied 33 ***

Berger Will Play

The fact that district tourneys are being held this week will cut into the strength of the C. A. C. basketball team for its game against the Waterloo Wonders—Shadel Saunders, New Holland coach, will not be able to play since his cagers swing into action at 6 p. m. in Westerville—Carl Berger's Pickaway boys play in the afternoon so he'll be on hand—THERE'LL BE FREE DANCING AFTER THE BALL GAME ***

May Hurt McKinley

John Reed, new football coach at Canton McKinley, may not find his material so plentiful as his predecessors, if the city board of education carries out a plan it now contemplates—McKinley, the only senior high school in this city of 110,000 souls, has 4,000 pupils—it is planned to make four year high schools of three other city schools—Lehman Junior high would be the first, starting in 1937 ***

Some scribbles

Charley Phister, Canton bowler, recently rolled two perfect games in a Buffalo, N. Y. match  The Kent State university wrestling team has won 21 straight matches—The team is undefeated in two straight seasons  Cleveland will be the scene of the 1936 National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament providing the Great Lakes Exposition, sponsors of an industrial pageant underwrite the event ***

COUNTY SPORTS READY TO BEGIN FISHING TOURS

Spring sunshine, kites, marbles, robins, housecleaning and last but not least, fishing.

During the last two days, local "boys" who are followers of Isaac Walton, have assembled and flexed their veteran bait and fly rods, dreamed of prize catches, and started their spring overhauling jobs of silk winding, lure repairing and pounding out the dents of battered tackle boxes.

Continued warm, clear weather will send scores of local fishermen to Pickaway-co streams next week for their first taste of the 1936 season. Flood stages of the last week will require from one to two weeks for the larger streams to clear, veterans report. Smaller streams will clear much sooner, they explained, and should be in fair condition next Sunday.

With the opening of the season, fisherman will be interested in knowing how many fish were "planted" in local streams for the 1936 season. A total of 43,600 finger-length fish were distributed. The listings are: blue gills, 23,000; rock bass, 10,000; crappies, 8,000 and large and small mouth bass, 2,600.

Matured fish totalled 3,380 and included 600 channel catfish, 200 bullhead catfish, 380 black bass, 410 rock bass, 1,700 crappies and 90 black suckers, according to reports furnished by H. E. Betz, president of the Pickaway Farmer's and Sportsman's association.

NOTRE DAME TO REMAIN OUT OF OLYMPIC MEET

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 4—(UP)—Notre Dame will not participate in the 5th district Olympic basketball tournament at Indianapolis next month, because it would require prolonged absence from classes, Coach George Keogan announced today. He pointed out that the Irish have gone through a unusually strenuous schedule this season, winning 20 out of 22 games.

STEELE ASSURED BOUT WITH CHAMPION RISCO

SEATTLE, March 4—(UP)—Freddie Steele, 22-year-old "Tacoma Assassin" regarded as the west's best middleweight, today held a contract which will give him a non-title shot at Eddie (Babe) Risko, world middleweight champion.

Steele will get $4,000 for his efforts and Risko will receive $6,000 from Promoter Nate Druxman, who will stage the fight at Seattle Civic Arena March 24.

Druxman said he signed the non-

All Big Ten Teams But Iowa Ahead in Attendance

CHICAGO, March 4—(UP)—Basketball proved a huge success financially in the Big Ten conference this year. A United Press survey showed that more than 400,000 persons paid nearly $300,000 to watch the teams.

The average attendance was 4,000, including both conference and non-conference games. Average admission price was estimated at 75 cents.

A new high mark for paid admissions was set at Wisconsin where 101,316 seats were sold for 12 home games. Badger authorities sold 7,634 season coupon books to students and faculty members while 1,000 additional seats for each home contest were gobbled up by the public.

The largest crowd to see a single game was 9,554 when Purdue played Ohio State at Columbus Jan. 6. It was the largest crowd to attend a game there since 1924, when the Buckeyes won their only undisputed Big Ten title.

A season record also was established at Ohio State with 57,944. The best previous mark was 47,944, set in 1933.

Purdue was sold out in advance for three of its conference games and played to a capacity crowd each time at home. Northwestern, usually one of the poorest drawing cards at home, was sold out twice, against Purdue and Notre Dame. The only school which had a serious slump was Iowa, which drew 43,500 in 10 games.

title bout because Risko asked $35,000 for a championship match with Steele.

The largest crowd to see a single game was 9,554 when Purdue played Ohio State at Columbus Jan. 6. It was the largest crowd to attend a game there since 1924, when the Buckeyes won their only undisputed Big Ten title.

A season record also was established at Ohio State with 57,944. The best previous mark was 47,944, set in 1933.

Purdue was sold out in advance for three of its conference games and played to a capacity crowd each time at home. Northwestern, usually one of the poorest drawing cards at home, was sold out twice, against Purdue and Notre Dame. The only school which had a serious slump was Iowa, which drew 43,500 in 10 games.

OHIO STATE FIVE WINS 28-23 FROM NOTRE DAME FOE

Guarding of Dye and Scoring of Thomas Turns Surprise Trick in Indiana

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 4.—(UP)—A measure of revenge for the stunning fourth quarter defeat Ohio State suffered at the hands of Notre Dame in football last fall was tasted by the Bucks today.

An inconsistent Ohio basketball quintet which was alternately good and bad all season, ended its campaign here last night when it turned back a heavily favored Irish five 28 to 23.

The defeat was Notre Dame's second in 22 contests this season. It broke a 13 game winning streak for the Ramblers.

Lanky Earl Thomas, Ohio State center, and "Tippy" Dye, the mite guard, climaxed sterling all-season performances with brilliant play against the Irish.

Thomas scored 10 points, while Dye guarded Johnny Moir, Notre Dame's high scoring sophomore forward, and limited him to three points.

Ohio jumped into a five point lead at the outset of the contest and Notre Dame didn't score its first points until Paul Nowak came through with a long basket.

After Nowak broke the ice, the Irish rallied and at half time had pulled within one point of the Bucks, 13 to 14.

In the second half Ohio again dominated the play.

Inability of Notre Dame to convert free thrown was directly responsible for its loss. The Irish made only three out of 12, while Ohio was successful on six out of 10.

The triumph enabled the Bucks to complete their season with 12 victories and eight defeats.

EAGLES TO TAKE ACTION TOWARD ATHLETIC TEAM

An athletic committee to sponsor a program of athletics among members of Circleville Aerie, No. 685, Fraternal Order of Eagles, was named by Charles Garner, president of the Aerie, at a meeting Tuesday night.

The Eagles are to sponsor a state-wide program of athletics this year.

The local committee consists of: Nelson Garner, chairman, and H. O. Eveland, O. P. Miller, Charles Sampson, and William McLaughlin.

This committee will endeavor to form a baseball team, softball team, bowling team, and other teams to represent the local Aerie of Eagles. Games will be booked with other Aeries in this district, and with independent teams throughout the seasons. At the end of each season, the athletic committee of the Ohio State Aerie of Eagles will try to arrange for state tournaments in each sport to determine state Eagle champions. Only Eagle teams will be eligible to compete in the tournaments, under rules to be drafted by the state committee.

DEAN DEMANDS $10,000 LESS THAN RICKEY'S PAY

BRADENTON, Fla., March 4.—Dizzy Dean, $40,000 step-child of the St. Louis Cardinals' front office, checked in at the Cards' spring headquarters today.

Obviously he was here to talk business with Branch Rickey, and he had a new, strong argument with which to heal his holdout troubles:

"If Branch Rickey is worth $50,000 a year to the Cards, I am worth $40,000, Rickey never drew anybody into the park, did he?"

Capable Officials

Two capable officials will be in charge of the central district cage tourney Friday and Saturday at Delaware.—They are Earl D. Gross of New Philadelphia and A. N. Smith of Elyria.—Gross is mayor of his city and has been an arbiter in state tourneys for several years.—He has again been signed to work in the state meet in Columbus.—Gross' nickname is "Monk".—He starred in football and basketball when in school and matriculated at Marietta ***

Young High by Far

Here's an anxie we almost forgot in the county tourney.—Chuck Young of Ashville was by far the highest scorer in the meet with 63 points in four games, an average of almost 16.—His nearest competitor, of course, was Ev Landman, whose 26 in the final game gave him a total of 44.—Rhodes of Pickaway tallied 33 ***

Berger Will Play

The fact that district tourneys are being held this week will cut into the strength of the C. A. John Reed, new football coach at Canton McKinley, may not find his material so plentiful as his predecessors, if the city board of education carries out a plan it now contemplates.—McKinley, the only senior high school in this city of 110,000 souls, has 4,000 pupils.—It is planned to make four year high schools of three other city schools.—Lehman Junior high would be the first, starting in 1937 ***

COUNTY SPORTS READY TO BEGIN FISHING TOURS

Spring sunshine, kites, marbles, robins, housecleaning and last but not least, fishing.

During the last two days, local "boys" who are followers of Izaak Walton, have assembled and flexed their veteran bait and fly rods, dreamed of prize catches, and started their spring overhauling jobs of silk winding, lure repairing and pounding out the dents of battered tackle boxes.

Continued warm, clear weather will send scores of local fishermen to Pickaway-co streams next week for their first taste of the 1936 season. Flood stages of the last week will require from one to two weeks for the larger streams to clear, veterans report. Smaller streams will clear much sooner, they explained, and should be in fair condition next Sunday.

With the opening of the season, fishermen will be interested in knowing how many fish were "planted" in local streams for the 1936 season. A total of 43,600 finger-length fish were distributed. The listings are: blue gills, 23,000; rock bass, 10,000; crappies, 8,000 and large and small mouth bass, 2,600.

Matured fish totalled 3,380 and included 600 channel catfish, 200 bullhead catfish, 380 black bass, 410 rock bass, 1,700 crappies and 90 black suckers, according to reports furnished by H. E. Betz, president of the Pickaway Farmer's and Sportsman's association.

NOTRE DAME TO REMAIN OUT OF OLYMPIC MEET

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 4.—(UP)—Notre Dame will not participate in the 5th district Olympic basketball tournament at Indianapolis next month, because it would require prolonged absence from classes, Coach George Keogan announced today. He pointed out that the Irish have gone through a unusually strenuous schedule this season, winning 20 out of 22 games.

THESE representatives of 15 class A high schools will seek the central district basketball title at Ohio Wesleyan university, Delaware, this week and next.

The 15 schools are Circleville, Delaware Willis, Lancaster, Marion Harding, Mount Vernon, Newark, Westerville, Columbus Aquinas, Bexley, Columbus Central Columbus East Grandview, Columbus South, Columbus North and Columbus West.

Counties making up the central district are Pickaway, Delaware, Fairfield, Marion, Knox, Licking and Franklin.

Columbus Central, coached by W. Guy Kessler, won the district crown last year.

Columbus East is the favorite for this year's title, but Newark and Marion Harding are tipped as dark horses.

The schedule: Friday, March 6: 2 p. m., Grandview vs. South; 3 p. m., Delaware vs. Marion; 4 p. m., Mt. Vernon vs. Central; 5 p. m., Bexley vs. West; 7 p. m., North vs. Newark; 8 p. m., Circleville vs. Lancaster; 9 p. m., East vs. Westerville; Aquinas, bye.

CHICAGO, March 4.—(UP)—Basketball proved a huge success financially in the Big Ten conference this year. A United Press survey showed that more than 400,000 persons paid nearly $300,000 to watch the teams.

The average attendance was 4,000, including both conference and non-conference games. Average admission price was estimated at 75 cents.

A new high mark for paid admissions was set at Wisconsin where 101,316 seats were sold for 12 home games. Badger authorities sold 7,634 season coupon books to students and faculty members while 1,000 additional seats for each home contest were gobbled up by the public.

Judges Are Listed
The committee of judges for the state contest is comprised of H. H. Davis, English professor of Ohio State university; Mrs. Wilbur Dewees, president of the Ohio department of the American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Lester Mappett, past president of the Auxiliary; Supreme Court Judges Arthur H. Day, Cleveland, Charles Zimmerman of Springfield, and Roy Williams of Sandusky, all Legionnaires; and L. W. Reese, Washington C. H. superintendent.

In announcing the winners to the local post, commander Bowen stated, "I must congratulate your contestants for the uniformly fine essays and your post for carrying on the department's program."

School Officials Pleased
City and county school officials and local post officers were highly pleased over the splendid record made by Pickaway-co pupils in the district contest.

Announcement of winners in the state contest are expected about March 15, Mr. Dauenhauer said.

On April 11, the six boys and six girls, winners of the state contest, will be assembled at a Columbus hotel. After attending Easter services at a Columbus church they will start on the Washington, D. C. trip. On the first day they will travel to Chambersburg, Pa., and on Monday will visit Gettysburg. The next stop will be Philadelphia where they will visit Independence hall and other places of interest.

From Tuesday night until Friday, the contest winners will remain in Washington. Trips to Mt. Vernon and Annapolis Naval Academy will be made on Wednesday. On Thursday they will visit the federal buildings in Washington and Senator Vic Donahey has been asked to arrange for a visit with President Roosevelt. The children will return to their homes on April 19. They will be accompanied on the tour by members of the American Legion and the Auxiliary.

Fine Service Example
E. L. Bowsher, state director of education, declared the Legion's contest was one of the finest examples of service to community, state and nation, in which he had participated. In many schools the essay contest was made a part of the English and American history classes. Essays were used as final semester and term examinations.

Many teachers paid high tribute to the foresight of the Legion in making possible the education of the children and at the same time providing them with the incentive to strive for a more advanced education through travel to the nation's historical places.

Who Receives the Most Per Hour in Hollywood? Mae West or Clark Gable? No! — You're Mistaken — Read This!

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—The highest paid movie stars per minute are not first line talent, such as Clark Gable or Mae West or Charles Laughton, but babies.

Cherubic, smiling, healthy infants earn an enormous amount for appearing before the cameras. A month-old infant earning $150 a minute for screen takes is potentially worth $432,000 if its salary is figured on a basis of a forty-eight hour week.

At this rate it would take the salaries of several highly paid movie stars to equal the income of a solitary infant. In one week the Dionne quintuplets would be well on their way to becoming multi-millionaires and the mythical King Midas would pale in insignificance beside a mere infant.

Ab—There's a Catch!

But there is a rattle in this story. A baby doesn't work eight hours a day or a full week or an hour a day or even one minute a day. Contracts determined by the law of California and involving the parents and the studio limit a baby's day to a maximum of thirty seconds. The cameras hardly have an opportunity to begin rolling before the baby must be picked up and carried off to his crib by his or her proud parents, who are $75 richer for the infant's brief change of scenery.

The law providing these terms probably is one of the most rigidly enforced laws in California. Doctors and nurses are on hand with stopwatches to see that the baby's working day ends when it should. It is part of the policy that the studios and the state follow in protecting the eyes of the very young against the blinding Klieg lights, which are strong enough to pierce the Hollywood sky with long white fingers when placed out on Hollywood boulevard to help ballyhoo a west coast or world premier.

The older a child becomes the lower the salary rate descends. Thus a child from one month to three months of age is entitled to $50 a minute, while others from three to six earn merely $25 per minute. These are allowed on the set only twenty minutes. Children from six to eighteen months of age usually are paid on a scale of ten dollars a minute and are allowed to work two hours a day.

Animals, too, are highly paid but they don't begin to approach the salaries offered to babies.

One of the highest paid animal stars in the industry is Jiggs, the movie chimpanzee, who earns $350 a week and works several weeks each year. Salaries of animals depend on the extent of their training and the tricks they can do.

There are several firms in Hollywood that concentrate on training animals for the movies and from these firms the studios can get anything from a trained cockroach to an elephant. A lion farm, situated a short distance from Hollywood, often furnishes lion cubs and grown lions for the screen.

Pay For a Trick Horse
Jack Boyle has a horse that is trained to fall when told to do so.

Our American Heritage.
The following statement was issued by Mr. Dauenhauer Tuesday evening: "I take this opportunity to thank, on behalf of Howard Hall post, No. 134, the American Legion, the following persons who rendered such splendid service in making our part in this contest such a huge success: George McDowell, county superintendent of schools; Frank Fischer, superintendent of the Circleville schools; A. J. Ford, post education committee chairman; William Betts, post Americanization committee chairman; Mrs. E. S. Thacher, chairman of the Auxiliary Americanization committee; the local judges, Mrs. W. J. Graham, Mrs. Howard Jones and J. O. Eagleson, and the principals and teachers of all the schools that participated in the contest. It is due to the interest of these teachers that so many district winners from Pickaway-co were selected.

Telegrams Arouse Lobby Prober

SENATE action to compel production of subpoenaed documents if a court injunction forbidding a telegraph company to produce telegrams was not rescinded was sought by Senator Hugo L. Black of Alabama, chairman of the senate lobby committee, as the committee reopened hearings in Washington. The stand was taken by Senator Black, after Silas Strawn, Chicago lawyer, a former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, had obtained an order forbidding the Western Union to produce telegrams sent by his law firm. Three Democratic members of the senate committee are shown at the hearing. They are, left to right, Senators Black, Sherman Minton of Indiana and Lewis B. Schwellenbach of Washington.

School Officials Pleased
City and county school officials and local post officers were highly pleased over the splendid record made by Pickaway-co pupils in the district contest.

Announcement of winners in the state contest are expected about March 15, Mr. Dauenhauer said.

On April 11, the six boys and six girls, winners of the state contest, will be assembled at a Columbus hotel. The next stop will be Philadelphia where they will visit Independence Hall and other places of interest.

From Tuesday night until Friday, the contest winners will remain in Washington. Trips to Mt. Vernon and Annapolis Naval Academy will be made on Wednesday. On Thursday they will visit the federal buildings in Washington and Senator Vic Donahey has been asked to arrange for a visit with President Roosevelt. The children will return to their homes on April 19. They will be accompanied on the tour by members of the American Legion and the Auxiliary.

Fine Service Example
E. L. Bowsher, state director of education, declared the Legion's contest was one of the finest examples of service to community, state and nation, in which he had participated. In many schools the essay contest was made a part of the English and American history classes. Essays were used as final semester and term examinations.

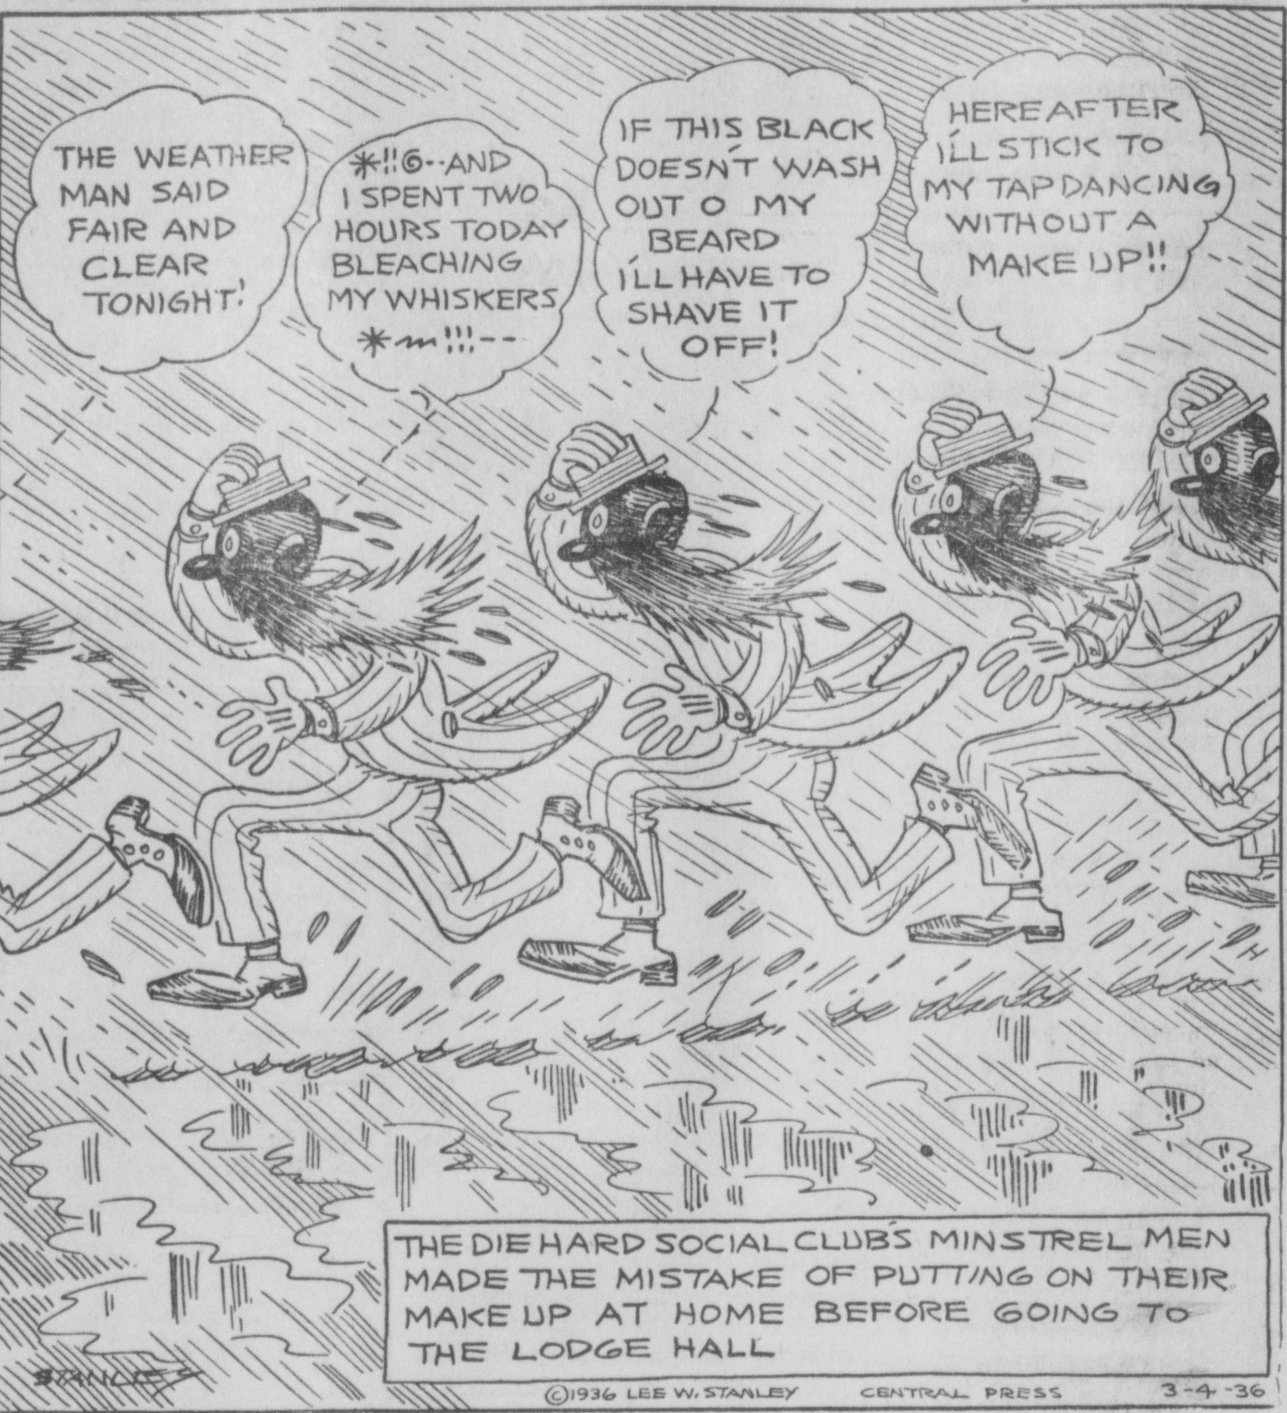

Many teachers paid high tribute to the foresight of the Legion in making possible the education of the children and at the same time providing them with the incentive to strive for a more liberal education through travel to the nation's historical places.

Who Receives the Most Per Hour in Hollywood? Mae West or Clark Gable? No! — You're Mistaken — Read This!

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—The highest paid movie stars per minute are not first line talent, such as Clark Gable or Mae West or Charles Laughton, but babies.

Cherubic, smiling, healthy infants earn an enormous amount for appearing before the cameras. A month-old infant earning $150 a minute for screen takes is potentially worth $432,000 if its salary is figured on a basis of a forty-eight hour week.

At this rate it would take the salaries of several highly paid movie stars to equal the income of a solitary infant. In one week the Dionne quintuplets would be well on their way to becoming multi-millionaires and the mythical King Midas would pale in insignificance beside a mere infant.

Ab—There's a Catch!
But there is a rattle in this story. A baby doesn't work eight hours a day or a full week or an hour a day or even one minute a day. Contracts determined by the law of California and involving the parents and the studio limit a baby's day to a maximum of thirty seconds. The cameras hardly have an opportunity to begin rolling before the baby must be picked up and carried off to his crib by his or her proud parents, who are $75 richer for the infant's brief change of scenery.

The law providing these terms probably is one of the most rigidly enforced laws in California. Doctors and nurses are on hand with stopwatches to see that the baby's working day ends when it should. It is part of the policy that the studios and the state follow in protecting the eyes of the very young against the blazing kilowatt lights, which are strong enough to pierce the Hollywood sky with long white fingers when placed out on Hollywood boulevard to help ballyhoo a west coast or world premier.

The older a child becomes the lower the salary rate descends. Thus a child from one month to three months of age is entitled to $50 a minute, while others from three to six earn merely $25 per minute. These are allowed on the set only twenty minutes. Children

"Our American Heritage."
The following statement was issued by Mr. Dauenhauer Tuesday evening: "I take this opportunity to thank, on behalf of Howard Hall post, No. 134, the American Legion, the following persons who rendered such splendid service in making our part in this contest such a huge success: George McDowell, county superintendent of schools; Frank Fischer, superintendent of the Circleville schools; A. J. Ford, post education committee chairman; William Betts, post Americanization committee chairman; Mrs. E. S. Thacher, chairman of the Auxiliary Americanization committee; the local judges, Mrs. W. J. Graham, Mrs. Howard Jones and J. O. Eagleson, and the principals and teachers of all the schools that participated in the contest. It is due to the interest of these teachers that so many district winners from Pickaway-co were selected.

The highest paid stars of Hollywood are not the Garbos or the Gables but—babies. A month-old infant earns $150 a minute for screen work.

from six to eighteen months of age usually are paid on a scale of ten dollars a minute and are allowed to work two hours a day.

Animals, too, are highly paid but they don't begin to approach the salaries offered to babies.

One of the highest paid animal stars in the industry is Jiggs, the movie chimpanzee, who earns $350 a week and works several weeks each year. Salaries of animals depend on the extent of their training and the tricks they can do. There are several firms in Hollywood that concentrate on training animals for the movies and from these firms the studios can get anything from a trained cockroach to an elephant. A lion farm, situated a short distance from Hollywood, often furnishes lion cubs and grown lions for the screen.
